Andrew is an experienced retail investment sales broker with a focus on single-tenant net lease properties, strip centers, and retail pad sites throughout the Pacific Northwest.

With over seven years of expertise in commercial real estate, he has developed a deep understanding of the retail market, allowing him to navigate complex transactions and provide customized solutions for clients. His ability to work with sellers, buyers, landlords, and tenants has equipped him with a unique perspective, fostering creative problem-solving and strategic deal-making.

Andrew's areas of expertise include site selection, lease negotiations, land development, sale-leasebacks, and investment sales. Andrew offers a comprehensive, seamless experience for clients from start to finish, ensuring that each transaction is handled efficiently and with precision. He partners with Kyle Graff at Kidder Mathews' headquarters in downtown Seattle.

He holds a bachelor's degree from Washington State University in strategic communication with a minor in business economics. When he's not in the office, Andrew enjoys basketball, golf, exploring new restaurants, and spending time with his family.
